NEW YORK, May 4 (AP) -Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Min-nesota has won a delayed victory in the Ohio presidential primary election, defeating South Dakota Sen. George McGovern to win the state's 38 at-large delegate votes to the Democratic National Convention Sen. Bumphrey, however, surrendered many of the state's 115 congressional district delegates to Sen. McGovern. With 12,095 of Ohio's 12,648 polling places tabulated by state election officials, Sen. Humphrey had 38 at-large votes and 38 from eight congressional districts, while Sen. McGovern had 64 delegates from 12 congressional districts. Thirteen other Heldgard were won by local impacts count. With 12,005 polling places reported, the vote totals for the 38 at large delegates were: Sen. Humphrey: 454,772; Sen. McGov-ern, 431,774; Sen. Edmund Muskle of Maine, 97,530; Sen. Hemy Jackson of Washington, 88,459; orner Sem Eugene McCarthy of Minnesota 24,491.

U.S. Again Breaks Off Peace Parleys Secret Talks Deadlocked, Porter Hints

By Jonathan C. Randal

PARIS, May 4 (WP) .- For the second time in six weeks, the United States and South Vietnam indefinitely suspended the peace conference here today smid indirect U.S. confirmation that fruitless secret talks with the Communists had prompted the Emerging from the 149th formal session of the peace talks, U.S. Ambassador William J. Porter said, "Don't get the idea this [suspension] is the result purely of this meeting held here to-

"It represents also a complete lack of progress in every avail-able channel," he added in what was interpreted as a reference to recent secret contacts with North

Vietnam in Paris and elsewhere. The impasse in both secret and semi-public formal negotiations was underlined by the North Vietnamese delegation's press spokesman, Nguyen Thanh Le. He said the "minimum sign" required to resume "serious negotiations".... a circumlocution for secret talks in the context—was U.S. willingness to hold the formal peace

Possibility of Return

Mr. Le also raised the possibility that Le Duc Tho-the Hanoi Polithuro member who returned only Sunday, presumably to hold secret talks with the United States—might return to North Vietnam unless the formal conference sessions resumed.

"If the American administration continues its acts of sebotage at the Paris conference and re-fuses to negotiate seriously," Mr. Le said, "Le Duc Tho could re-examine the question of his presence in Paris."

But were North Vietnamese conditions fulfilled, Mr. Le said, Mr. The "could stay in Paris as long as it proves necessary." This was regarded as an allusion to ssible secret talks with Henry A Kissinger, the White House official associated with such meetings since 1969, or with other U.S. officials.

The new allied suspension was not a surprise. Last Thursday in resuming the formal conference after a five-week break, Mr. Porter warned that a new suspension was in the cards if the Communists "continue to refuse to deal with the substance of the present invasion [of South Vietnam] and general problems of

Naval Strength Also Increased

U.S. Sending More Planes to War

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON, May 4 (IHT). The Pentagon announced today that more warplanes are being sent to Indochina, bringing to about 200 the number sent since the North Vletnamese offensive began on March 30. Including B-52 bombers, there are about 650 U.S. combat planes in the area. The number of planes being

A Defense Department spokesman, Jerry W. Friedheim, indicated that naval strength in the area was also being increased, with some ships en route and others scheduled for immediate departure.

The announcement came as the United States again broke off the peace talks in Paris, charging that no progress had been made through any channel. Mr. Friedheim said that the reinforcements were not related to the suspension, but were "part of an overall" plan to make sure Gen. Abrams [the U.S. commander in Vietnam] has available to him all the air and naval assets he needs to protect remaining American troops and to assist the South Vietnamese."

Mr. Friedheim also made public photographs of Soviet weapons that he said the North Vietnamese were using in South Vietnam for the first time. He said most of these supplies were coming through the port of Hal-phong, but refused to answer questions whether the administration was planning air or naval one weapon in the photographs was an anti-aircraft missile that can be fired from the shoulder of an infantryman: It reportedly has downed two small U.S. air craft in the past week.

Report on POWs In another war-related development in Washington, a Teamsters Union vice-president, Harold Gibbons, who recently returned from a trip to Hanoi, said that North Vietnamese officials had informed him that they stopped releasing U.S. prisoners of war because of the "propaganda" uses made of the last three who were freed. Mr. Gibbons said that he had been told that the policy could be changed if Hanoi was sure thet the United States would not promote "propaganda tours" of the men An official of an organization of relatives of prisoners, appearing at the same news conference, said that she had been assured by the administration that it would seek to curtail the activities of former POWs in the interest of further releases.

The organization also announced what it termed "an important breakthrough" in the treatment of the prisoners agreement by Hanoi to allow the delivery of 200 foreign-language textbooks to

Mr. Gibbons said that the North Vistnamese had agreed to the delivery during a visit in March by him and other U.S. labor leaders. He added that the foreign language texts were chosen be-

If this policy is changed, he added, he was told he would be informed and would travel to Hanoi to accompany prisoners

Paratroops In Drive to Aid Kontum

SAIGON, May 4.—There was a full today in the North Vietnamese offensive in South Viet-The United States and Saigon, meanwhile, made several moves to shore up the country's defenses against the invaders

Possibly regrouping after lightning-fast advances in their 36day-old onslaught, the Communists took only one major initiative today—a propagandistic one. They proclaimed the establishment of a "revolutionary administration" in the northern-most provincial capital of Quang Tri, which their forces seized over little resistance Monday.

South Vietnamese forces in one area launched Salgon's first counteroffensive since the invasion began March 30, and President Nguyen Van Thieu went to Hué to bolster that major city's defenses against the threat of attack by nearby Red detachments. The United States delivered the first of a group of reconditioned tanks to replace South Vietnamese armor lost in the early stages of the enemy attacks. Additionally, Washington announced that it would send more warplanes to the Southeast Asian war theater, bringing to around 300 the number sent since early last mouth and to 650 the total of U.S. strike planes in Indochina. A U.S. team of military logistics experts arrived to begin a field study of what additional equipment is needed by American and South Vietnamese forces.

Several hundred Sooth Vietnamese paratroopers launched the Salgon government's first counterattack, a drive to reopen the supply lifeline to the beleaguered city of Kontum. The parachutists landed in helicopters and attacked Red forces around Highway 14 between Kontum and Pleiku. Pield reports from the area, eight miles south of Kontum and 19 miles north of Pleiku, said 40 North Vietnamese troops were killed in early fight-

Fighting around the highway, in the Central Highlands, was continuing at dusk. The government paratroopers had found three-man Communist gun crews dug in, in caves in the mountainous area. U.S. and South Vietnamese fighter-bombers attacked the enemy installations with napalm. Other U.S. air activity today involved raids on Communist tank columns reported sighted three miles north of the South Vietnamese defense line above Hué—a defensive position along tbe My Chanh River. Other American air strikes were directed against enemy resupply activthe A Shan Valley.

Allied military leaders expect the main Communist drive against Hue to come from the A Shau Valley. The South Vietnamese 1st Division has fought several engagements with North Vietnamese units in the area. Hué, the old imperial capital of Vietnam, is believed to be the major target of the Communist offensive, as it was during their Tet offensive in 1968, when they held the city for 25 days while launching attacks on Saigon itself. Another positive development for the allies today was the cootinuing holdout of the provincial capital of An Loc, 60 miles north (Continued on Page 2, Col. 6)

Visits New Hué Commander

Thieu Orders Tough Anti-Terrorist Steps

HUE, May 4 (AP).-President Nguyen Jan Thieu flew to Hué today to meet with military commanders preparing their defense of the city, the Saigon military radio reported.

Mr. Thieu, who shook up his top military command yesterday in an effort to reverse the deteriorating situation in northern South Vietnam, conferred with his newly appointed First Military Region commander, Lt. Gen. Ngo Quang Truong, and several field

It is expected that Communist forces, fresh from their victory at Quang Tri and probably regrouping and resupplying, will assault Hué in the next few days.

Earlier today in Saigon, Mr. Thieu moved to tighten security in South Vietnam's cities and towns by ordering police and troops to "shoot on the spot" anyone engaging in terrorism or public disturbances.

The order, issued to military region commanders and province and district chiefs, was similar to a tough edict by Mr. Thieu during last year's violence-torn election campaign.
It was aimed this time at halting Communist terrorism and maintaining public order during the North Vietnamese offensive. Allied intelligence officials have Communist documents that indicate that terrorism and civil disruptions are planned as a later phase of the offensive.

At the same time, South Vietnamese and U.S. officials are concerned about keeping order among the population if the fighting continues to go against Salgon's forces.

The city of Hué, already under threat of Communist attack, has been subjected to scattered looting and other disturbances by deserters and troops involved in the rout from Quang Tri. Military police are trying to round up the troublemakers, stragglers and enemy agents.

Shops in the city were closed and services suspended, and more than half of the old capital's population of 200,000 was said to have fled south.

The official government news agency, Vietnam Press, said Mr. Thieu told the officials that all "subversive activities must be considered as initiated by Communist cadres aimed at taking power," or by "reactionary elements in collusion with the enemy."

Therefore all of these actions must be crushed by the army and police, meaning that responsible elements are entitled to kill on the spot all initiators of the said actions."

Mr. Thieu urged the commanders to appeal for the cooperation of the people in maintaining security and said they should use the government radio and television to explain the strict measures.

path to a parliamentary compromise on West Germany's controversial Eastern treaties opened up here today as Chancellor. Willy Brandt and the opposition fourth today to draft a comleader, Rainer Barzel, agreed to promise resolution on the treaties start the crucial Bundestag debate on ratification Tuesday and to vote Wednesday.

The two made the agreement this morning in the restaurant of the Bundestag over glasses of dark beer and sealed it with a handshake.

However, the compromise now being worked out involves other issues far more entangled than the timing of the ratification vote. Chief among them, in the view of well-placed sources in both government and opposition camps, is the prestige and continuing authority of Mr. Barzel as head of the Christian Democratic Union-Christian Social Union

Yesterday, both Mr. Barzel and spokesmen of the governing coalition were talking in terms of deadlock on the treaties issue and of confrontation between the two parliamentary groupings, whose nominal strengths are currently almost equal in the 496-seat Bundestag. There was no outward sign of compromise.

The spectacle of hardened fronts was described as part of Mr. Barzel's tactic of preparing to emerge in the end as the man of reason who helped "save the treaties" Mr. Brandt signed with Moscow and Warsaw in 1970. Sources in the government said Mr. Brandt was willing to support the opposition leader's tactic under the half-humorously-meant BONN, May 4 (NYT).—The long as his Eastern treaties go through parliament unscathed, This is why Mr. Brandt authorized setting up three bipartisan commissions yesterday and a to be adopted by the Bundestag as a whole.

> The resolution apparently will be a fairly innocuous unflateral statement, mainly on the Moscow treaty, explaining how Bonn interprets it in terms of the future of the divided German nation and West Germany's relations with its neighbors.

The government expects it can obtain some form of acknowledgment of the Bundestag resolution from the Russians that will satisfy Mr. Barzel, an authoritative source said.

The resolution and its nominal acceptance by the Soviet government would suffice to save Mr. Barzei from retaliatory steps by extreme conservatives in his own ranks, it was reasoned in both camps.

The extremist group was said to include expellee politicians like Herbert Czaja and Walter Becher as well as defectors from Socialist-Free Democratic coalition like Erich Mende, Siegfried Zoglmann and Herbert.

Two leading conservatives publicly and bitterly antagonistic to Eastern treaties in the past, Gerhard Schroeder and Franz Josef Strauss, have apparently softened their resistance.

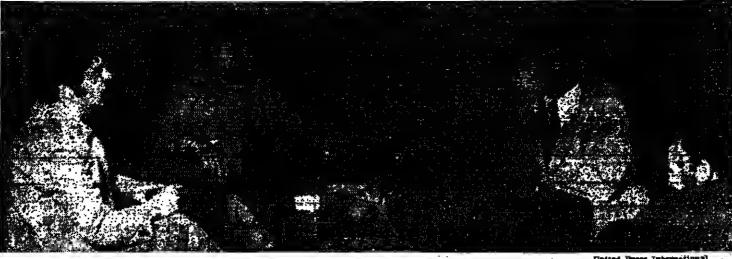

"The ratification train is running," a government source said. The engineer is Willy Brandt. Barzel is now pouring on the coal, and some of his men are still trying to switch signals. But Schoeder has just hopped on the

He predicted that on Wednes day, in the crucial vote, 10 to 15 conservatives would cast their ballots for the treaties, giving the coalition well over the 248 it can now count on.

An opposition politician described the last hours and days of behind the scenes politicking as "high stakes poker" in which Mr. Barzet had the weaker cards. "That is why he has to bluff and that is why he let the chancellor see his hand," the conservative went on. "Mr. Barzei wants the treaties to go through, with his assistance, and get them out of the way. Then we can fight the coalition more effectively on other battlefields."

For the public record, Mr. Barzel said tonight that "there is not enough as yet" to permit bipartisan handling of the treatles and Chancellor Brandt said only he was "very cautiously optimistic." The poker game goes

Pawnshop Clerk Tells of Sale Of Murder Gun to Miss Davis

SAN JOSE, Calif., May 4 (Reuters).—A pawnshop clerk testified yesterday at Angela Davis's trial that on Aug. 5, 1970, the defendant bought from him a shotgun used 42 hours later to murder a state judge at the Marin County Courthouse.

The witness, presenting key testimony for the prosecution, said that the black militant paid $35 for the Spanish-made gun in his San Francisco shop. The serial number on the weapon he sold her was the same as the number on the shotgun used in the courthouse fraces, in which four persons were killed, Frank Blumenthal testified before the trial jury.

Miss Davis, 28, is charged with supplying weapons used in the abortive kidnapping attempt in which she allegedly planned to obtain hostages to force the release of "Soledad Brother" George Jackson from San Quentin Pris-

Mr. Blumenthal's testimony is considered the most significant prosecution evidence so far since it indicates that Miss Davis committed an overt act, a legal requirement if she is to be found guilty under California law.

Description of Companion Mr. Blumenthal said Miss Davis was accompanied by "a young Negro gentleman . . around 20 to 25 years old," a description roughly matching that of 17year-old Jonathan Jackson. The state contends that Jonathan, George's brother, was with Miss

Escape Plot Outlined

Earlier yesterday, Mrs. Mabel Magers testified for the prosecution that she had lent her Volkswagen sedan to Jonathan Jackson three days before the courthouse shootout. She said she did not learn what became of it until six weeks later, when Jackson's mother, Georgia, told her that the car was at San Francisco International Airport. The state says Miss Davis drove the Volkswagen to the airport and waited there for Jonathan

Establishment Lawyer Defends Dissenters

Unlikely Foe for Spanish Regime

Victorian waiting room is dominated by sculptured hands that reach out with a symbolism that tells a great deal about Jaime de Miralles, a 51-year-old Spanish lawyer who has incurred the wrath of the government as a defender of workers, priests, students and clandestine labor leaders charged with violating Spain's strict prohibition of political dissent and criticism.

A short man with gray hair and sardonic wit, Mr. Miralles is an unlikely enemy of the government. MADRID, May 4 (WP).-The The civil guard said that Mr. Patino was shot when the worker tried to grab his gun. Mr. Miralles set out to prove that Mr. Patino was shot in the back, and that the civil guard tried to cover up the shooting. It was this brief that caused his arrest and possible court-martial. Military Aroused

The Patino case has aroused the military, who control the civil guard. It has also aroused hundreds of Madrid lawyers, who not only support Mr. Miralles's allegations, but contribute to the support of Mrs. Patino and her two young children.

The case is symbolic, however of a larger struggle for civil rights and equal justice being waged by lawyers of all political views throughout Spain.

It is this nationwide confrontation that makes the lawyer's arrest and possible court-martial particularly significant.

The lawyers, often supported by judges and progressives among the military, want to end all military trials for political crimes. They also want an end to the special courts that deal with drug and sex offenders.

"We want a total reform, and a single united legal and penal code wich does away with all the civil-war special military and civil courts that were created in wartime and incorporated in esent legislation," Mr Miralles Two days after he was released from prison, he was elected chalrman of a special committee set up by members of the Madrid bar association to defend the rights of lawyers and to pressure for reforms. Such re-forms, if adopted by the national bar association, would force the government to put them into effect or risk the powerful op-position of a majority of Spain's

The lawyers, in effect, have moved to oust their pro-government leadership, and it seems that they will succeed in electing liberals and reformers.

Daring Legal Tactics. Mr. Miralles has become a leader of this movement because of his background and his frequently daring legal tactics. The Patino case is only one example. Just as galling to the government was his recent defense of a Catholic priest charged with "illegal propaganda." not only moved for a mistrial in the public order tribunal, but also denounced the trial before the canon court in Madrid, He charged that it was being conducted behind closed doors, contrary to the arrangement made between the tribunal and the priest's bishop, and that the tribunal had changed the charge. from illegal assembly to illegal propaganda.

The public order tribunal, in fact, has suspended the priest's

It is known that the Subject was discussed by the two foreign ministers at lunch, and presumably it came up again this afternoon when Mr. Rogers saw Prime Minister Edward Heath for nearly an hour. However, both sides balked efforts to

The British feel that no practical formula can be found to reduce NATO forces in Europe. Both nations believe that a European security conference will be held but are skeptical about its possible accomplishments.

From London, Mr. Rogers went to the NATO headquarters in Brussels. He will then go on to Bonn Paris and Madrid. Spain is not a NATO member but the

It quotes Chairman Mao as having said in 1964 that he was "thrown into the revolution by unknown reasons" and in 1957 that 'I myself am a hourgeois intellectual, entered the bourgeois educational establishment and the atmosphere was bourgeois. Police throughout the country were on the alert to prevent violence by extremist groups.

In Milan, police sources said that 15 politicians and industrialists had been given special protection after the discovery of lists of kidnap victims prepared by the Red Brigades, Italy's leftist urban guerrillas who want to disrupt the elections.

Prospective Victims According to the sources, prospective victims included two top executives of Fiat, Italy's huge automobile company. The Red Brigades reportedly wanted to match the kidnapping of Oberdan Sallustro, the Fiat executive abducted and slain by leftist guerrillas in Argentina.

Meanwhile, in Genos yester-day, Italian police raided another urban guerrilla hideout, seizing a large supply of arms.

Three persons, identified as members of the leftist extremist group 22d of October, were arrested on charges of trafficking in arms.

Police seized two trunks filled with more than 50 rifles pistols and submachine guns, all said to bava been stolen.

Latest public opinion polls showed that millions of electors had not decided how to vote. Other indications pointed to an unprecedented hoost for the neo-Pascist Italian Social Movement. The various polls disagreed in nists. Some predicted losses and others gains. The Christian Democrats have said in their campaign that they would choose their coalition partners on the basis of vote results. The choice, they say, is between the conservative Liberals and the Socialists, who want a political role for the Communists.

The campaign will end at midnight ton-orrow. Voting will start at 7 a.m. Sunday and end at 2 p.m. Monday. Results are expected to be known by Tuesday morning.

NAPLES, May 4 (AP).—A Naples court last night imposed sen-tences on 221 defendants convicted of charges growing out of a nationwide scandal concerning faked driving licenses.

In one of the largest trials in

Police said that they uncovered the racket after a series of road accidents involving nearly blind motorists with licenses describing them as having excellent eye-

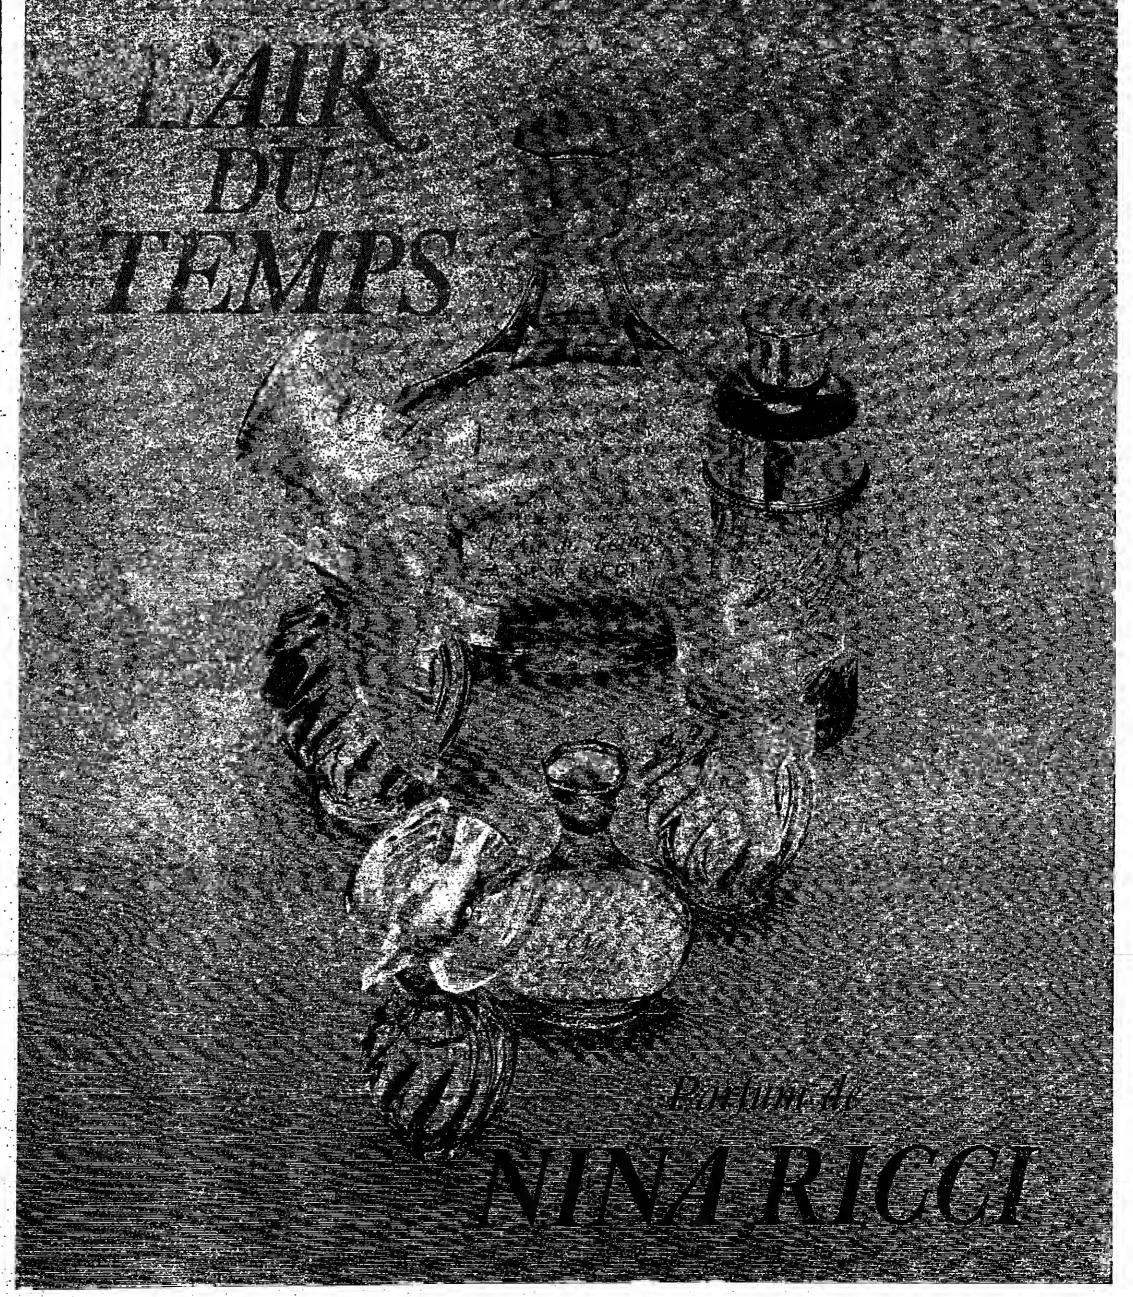

The court dropped charges against 53 of the original 274 defendants for lack of evidence.

The nthers were found guilty of bribery and faking official documents.

The beaviest terms were for Luigi Geri, 38, an engineer in charge of the state-required driving test, and Sabato Boccia, 35. and Giuseppe Frate, 42, described as the racket's masterminds. They each were sentenced to five years in jail and fined $510.

Six of 20 doctors on trial were acquitted. The others were sentenced to eight months each in jail. Most defendants, including some holders of the faked licenses, drew 16-month terms and fines of $102 each.

The trial lasted five months. Investigations in the case started in spring, 1967, in Rome, Naples, Sicily and many other areas in southern Italy.

The Alaska Pipeline: Not Now

Secretary of the Interior Morton will announce his decision on the Alaskan pipeline. This project, designed to carry oil from the rich fields on Alaska's Northern Slope toyear-round ports on the state's southern coast, has been more thoroughly studied than any other pipeline ever proposed. Yet some questions, key ones in our judgment, remain unanswered and on the record before him the secretary should refuse to grant the permit for the pipeline's construction.

The argument that has been made against this project is almost solely an environmental one. The line would run from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez, through miles of uninhabited tundra and mountain ranges and across rivers and streams, in an area essentially untouched by man.

That its construction would change this area, one of the last remaining large pieces of wilderness under the American flag, cannot be denied. That its mere existence after the construction crews have departed would change things is unquestioned. How much the change would be is open to dehate and the new, elaborate environmental impact statement prepared by the Department of the Interior might have triggered that debate except for the statement's great length and inaccessibility even to the groups most concerned. Nevertheless, that etatement makes it clear that the change, even if held to the minimum now technically possible, would be substantial and, if a major error such as a pipeline break occurred, could be monumental

That, in itself, is sufficient reason to give the secretary pause before granting this permit to build this pipeline in this place at this time. It might not be sufficient reason to refuse to grant that permit if the country was in desperate need of the oil and if there were no alternativee. But the country, in our judgment, is not that desperate and there is an alternative. The current application for the permit and the record accompanying it simply do not make out a case to the con-

The basic argument for building the pipeline now, as we understand it, is to reduce American dependence on foreign oil in the years ahead, a dependence that is constantly increasing and that has obvious economic and foreign policy implications. The extent of that reduction in dependence is in dispute largely because estimates of how much oil the nation will need a decade hence differ. But using the figures most favorable to this

Sometime in May, as things look now, pipeline, its construction would reduce the amount of oil the United States would have to have in 1980 from the Eastern Hemisphere from 10 times as much as it gets n w to six times as much. That difference, it seems to us, is not sufficient to justify an all-out effort to bring in the Northern Slope oil regardless of the environmental costs

> Even if it were, the fact that there is an alternative ought to be given more serious consideration by American officials than it has been so far. The Canadian government is greatly interested in building a gas pipeline from that same area in the Far North through the Mackenzle Valley into the center of the continent. It is also greatly interested, if the comments made here last month by the Canadian Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources are any indication, in having the two pipeline projects joined into one. The objections to this, eo far as we can tell, are that a pipeline across Canada would cost more and take longer to build. But it would pose substantially fewer risks to the environment in that the Canadian line would avoid, rather than cut through, major earthquake zones and eliminate the necessity for shipping the oil in tankers down the continent's West Coast. The inherent risks of an oil pipeline in an earthquake zone and a tanker going through the West Coast fishing areas are obvious.

If we are right in our judgment about the degree of dependence on foreign nations involved in oil needs, the time advantages of building across Alaska are irrelevant. But even if we are wrong, another factor enters in. It has been widely reported that some of the oil companies which own large parts of the Northern Slope field are negotiating to sell that oil to Japan once the pipeline is built. If that is true, the whole dependence argument eeems to us to have been wiped Putting all these things together, it is clear that Secretary Morton ought to reject the pipeline application. At the least, he has an obligation to explore fully the feasibility of the Canadian route and then to report fully to the American public on his findings. Too much of the fragile nature of Alaska's wilderness and of the waters of Canada'e West Coast is at stake to do otherwise. Time is not of the essence in this situation; correctness of judgment is, for the damage once done by the construction of a pipeline across that vast area can never be undone.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Canada has projected a surprisingly modest first step toward greater control of its own economy by means of government procedures for screening foreign bids to take over Canadian businesses. Following an exhaustive government study of foreign investment and the problems it could pose for Canadian covereignty, Prime Minister Trudeau'e cabinet has at last decided to act, for the present, only on business takeovers. The Conservative and New Democratic parties have attacked the bill for not going far enough to impose Canadian control over foreign firms or to expand Canadian participation and ownership. But while responding to a rising tide of economic nationalist sentiment, the government did not want to frighten off the large-scale American investment that has contributed so much to Canada's industrial development and high

New Factor in Negotiations

Since it is obvious that Mr. Nixon could not go to Moscow on May 22 if the military situation turned into an outright disaster. the American side does not deny that it is counting on a certain moderating influence of Moscow on Hanoi, But no one in Washington believes the Soviets are willing or able to stop the North Vietnamese offensive. The North Vietnamese breakthrough is from now on a new factor adding to the negotiation file an element that might well lead Hanol to buy on its own account the American proposals it rejected in 1971: standstill cease-fire, deadline for the withdrawal of all American forces, exchange of prisoners. This is just an assumption, but it is being made in official American circles, which notice with pleasure that Le Duc Tho did not mention the seven-point plan of the Viet Cong on his return to Paris. What reception could the United States give such a proposal? -From Le Monde (Paris).

Explosive Mideast Ingredients

Whether or not President Sadat thinks a war is coming in the next 12 months, his speeches do help to illuminate the dangerous sterility of the present situation. American initiative is totally discredited; UN initiative hardly ranks any higher; Resolution 242 has been finally torpedoed by Israel and its sponsors have nothing to put in its place. Neither an excessively confident Israel nor an excessively despairing Egypt can be regarded as anything but an explosive in-

The stakes are certainly similar -continuation of a viable democratic eystem dominated by the Catholic center and backed by the United States, or of that system coumbling eventually into the powerful Communist party, largest in West Europe.

In 1948 the challenge was openly acknowledged by both Washington and Moscow. They spent millions supporting their clients here and encouraged their propagandists to maneuver openly. This time although the confrontation exist in fact, nobody mentions it. There is discreet absence of admitted external interest and the campaign is based on internal policy

Intense Concern

Yet there remains intense foreign concern with this balloting which is of enormous importance to the strategic future of the Mediterranean and of "Europe" because of Italy's ties to NATO and the Common Market,

As is often the case with intelligent, cynical Italy, which seems frequently to have discovered a way of governing itself with no government at all, bope of effective democratic administration seemed lost by last spring. Yet, as is also often the case, fooled both others and

Almost every contemporary problem exists here. There are the juxtaposed problems of a developed, industrialized north and an underdeveloped south needing capital injections, Italy still contains two civilizations neither of which accepts the other. While venerating both the outmoded Adam Smith and the outmoded Karl Marx, it can replace

Yet, seeming paralyzed by this paradox and threatened with the same kind of apparent violence that produced Fascism fifty years ago, the country was suddenly galvanized by a regional election last June emphasizing the dangers of neo-fascism. Since then a subtle power contest shaped up.

On July 21, 1971, I wrote: "The United States has decided as a matter of policy that its interest will best be served in Italy by revivilication of a unified Christian Democratic [center] party. Therefore it is determined to help press for that party's reorganization prior to the parliamentary elections."

Invisibly this determination appears to have been reflected in this land which wearily respects strength. Last December, much to the surprise of everyone but especially of Moscow, Giovanni Leone, a Christian Democrat, was elected president— without, to their astonishment, needing to rely on the Communists for support.

Since then there has been a Christian Democratic revival. In two months they have moved from despair, anticipating a massive loss of parliamentary seats, to a hope of holding most of their present number of deputies. The threat of menacing extremist gains, especially on the far right, has considerably dimin-sible to govern this country and at other times unnecessary. But the people now appear suddenly to have made up their minds that the job is required and only they can do it.

The vote comes Sunday and the last minute resurvence apparently favors the center. Only when the ballots are counted can it be ascertained whether this tide started too late. At desperate moments in the past, it has been said of modern Italy: 'It can be compared to a centaur, which, when ill, doesn't know whether to call for a doctor or a veterinary." A similar illness 50 years ago produced the brutal veterinarian ministrations of Mussolini, This

French Murder Case Tries Justice System

By James Goldsborough

PARIS.—A routine investigation into the murder of a 16-year-old girl in the mining town of Brusy, in Artois, has turned into a confrontation between two of France's most powerful institutions, the notaire, and the juge d'instruction.

Because of the forces involved, the murder of Brigitte Dewevre last April 6 in a field behind her home has become the most prominent murder case here in years. And the center of attention is not the slain echoolgiri, but a strong, silent notaire, a tower of respectability in his community; and a peppery, talk-ative little judge from nearby Bethune, who had the notaire arrested, and so far has resisted the considerable pressures being brought to free him.

To understand the prominence being given this case—why it has dominated the front pages of the national press for almost a month-something must be known of the forces involved. The notariet, in France, has its roots in the scribes of antiquity, evolved under the Roman law and emerged in its present shape at the Revolution. Trained as a lawyer, the notaire eventually touches every citizen's life, whether by officiating at his marriage, authenticating his deeds and trusts or settling his wills and estates. In rural communities, the notaire is one of the notables, that small body men of note-once designated by the king-which runs things.

Notaire Iailed

Only in this case the notaire, Pierre Laroy, 37-year-old Rota-rian and sportsman, is in jail, indicted for the mutilation and murder of Miss Dewevre. The man who put him there, Judge Henri Pascal: 51, has focused attention as never before on the role of the juge d'instruction.

The office of juge d'instruction, or investigating magistrate, dates from the Revolution, but it, like the notaire, also has its origins in antiquity. French jurisprudence states that the institution is descended from the incuisitional practices of the Reman Catholic Church, For this reason, perhaps, the juge d'instruction has the reputation of being a prosecutor, although he is nothing of the kind.

He is one of the institutions that distinguishes French civil law from Anglo-Saxon common law. He is investigator, factfinder and indicting body rolled into one. But he is above all a judge, by definition impartial, and his role is only to recom-mend accusation and trial of those he believes likely to be

In the Brusy case, Mr. Len was questioned because his of was seen near the scene of crime and Brigitte was seen tris ing to a man shortly before heath. Under questioning, in Leroy's alibi showed several in accuracies. Judge Pascal ordered him beld in preventive determine tion, though the notaire continue to proclaim his innocence.

That was three weeks Since then many voices have have raised to protest Mr. Leny innocence. To begin with h vouch for his character. The the French notariat itself, and barrassed that one of theirs could be held, began to work for his release. At one point a simple minded working-man confessed that the winner who. the crime, bringing what Monde called ironically the gen eral "relief" that the "natural order of society" was being man tained and that a worker, not a notable, was guilty. Unfortunate : ly for the natural order of things the confession was a hoar.

But it was obvious that the French establishment was uncomfortable. A former Justice Min-ister wrote an article asking, in our justice just?" Finally, lest weekend, the procureur de la ne publique the prosecutor's office: requested, as he may, Mr. Leroy's Judge Pascal, as he may do turned down the prosecutor who is his superior. The strain of the little judge was showing. Be called a press conference to enbeen cases," he said, "where the accused stayed in jail three or four months and then confessed It is easy to criticize the judge, but in the end he is shown to have been right."

TV Documentary

All this had an extraordinary effect on the nation. French television decided to do a documentary on the situation. Just how powerful was the juge dinstruction that he could turn down the public prosecutor, which is hardly the body that usually urges liberty for the some 10,000 persons held at any time in preventive detention awaiting trial.
Was the juge d'instruction really. as Balzac wrote, "the most powerfol man in France, more powerful even than Louis XIV."

Judge Pascal dismissed such notions at his press conference. "We are alone," he said. "We must decide things with ou consciences. It is with my sor and my conscience that I hav decided that Mr. Leroy stays I

Musical Gone With the Wind'

By Henry Pleasants

With the Wind" should have been greeted by mixed notices in this morning's rapers seems, all in all, curiously appropriate.

There is much to admire in this monster musical; but much, too, where imaginative and adventurous concept has run ahead of realistic assessment of what can be accomplished in a mere three hours, on a mere stage, and in a mere theater, even so commodious a house as the Theatre Royal Drury Lane.

The problem with "Gone With the Wind," as theater, is one of both substance and scope: pageantry, panorama, historyand drama. It first appeared as, a theater piece in Tokyo, of all places where it ran for nine hows. The present musical, directed by Joe Layton and with music and lyrics by Harold Rome, is an adspitation of that production, also originally seen in Tokyo, with the running time reduced to four Reduction to the present three hours was assisted, according to Layton's wife, the actress Evelyn Russel, by the fact that "hello".

in Japanese comes out something like May the white blossoms of S Chi ONDON, May A CHUT That your mother's kindness fall on last night's opening of "Gone - your Sunday dinner." American Eriglish is less circumlocutory, even 19th-century Georgian.

Familiarity

A second problem is familiarity Just about everybody has read Margaret Mitchell's novel, or has seen the MGM film; or both, and knows Scarlett, Rhett, Ashley and Melanie as Vivien Leigh, Clark Gable, Leslie Howard and Olivia de Havilland. And almost everybody has a cinematic recollection of the burning of Atlanta

What to leave out? What to cut? Layton has, astonishingly, cut very little, probably not enough. There is much ingenious telescoping, assisted by miracles of scene shifting. The basic concept is a human drama played out downstage against a kaleidescopic background of Civil War. The result is a triumph of choreographic counterpoint stunning, however, as an example of directorial fluency and virtuosity that the drama is sometimes lost in its own restless setting. This is not only a uniquely choreographic musical not surprising in so accomplished a choreographer as Leyton; it is also uncommonly operatic in the sense that music is almost continuous, as background, orchestral and choral, when not in the throats of the principals themselves. It is evocative music, shrewdly paced the memorable melodies urgently required in this instance to put principals on even terms with stagecraft and choreography.

The Principals

Not that the principals don't do well with what Rome has given them, or that what he has given them does not fall engagingly upon the ear. June Ritchie, as Scarlett, on stage almost the entire evening, is only a moderate singer; but she turns in a brilliantly and mercurially bitchy characterization, and for a girl born in Blackpool and raised in Manchester she sounds incredibly

Harve Presnell, her Rhett But-

It is probably a mistake to introduce a live horse for Scarlett and Rhett's getaway from burning Atlanta—as splendid a conflagration, by the way, as any since Nero's. Horses belong in the circus—with sawdust, Last night's nag rose to the occasion in the time-honored fashion, brought down the house and trotted off. leaving the outskirts of Atlanta most hazardously booby-trapped.

The word asafetida is derived from the Persian are (mastic, resin, gum), which became asa in medieval Latin, plus the classical Latin fostida, stinking. Despite this frank description, it was not only prized as a condiment in ancient times, but was considered something of a panacea in medicine. Among other things, it was recommended as a stimulant for anemic people, was supposed to rid the intestinal tract of worms, and was prescribed as an anti-spasmodic in cases of hysteria and nervous ailments. Modern medicine agrees that it has carminative and antispasmodic qualities, and it is still people, who popularized asafetida in the ancient world, where it was not only accepted as a seasoner, but at certain times and places ranked as perhaps the most important of aromatic plants. The Persians crunched segments of its stem like candy and ate the leaves as a vegetable. calling it "a dish for the gods." The Greeks included it among the ingredients of an elixir compounded from opium, reputedly sovereign against snakebites. It is probable that it was the supposedly extinct Roman silphium, or at least closely related to it. It may have disappeared from the knowledge of the Western world after the collapse of the Roman Empire, like so many other 100ds which Rome had imported from the East, to be returned to Europe a thousand years or so later, for the word is first recorded as appearing in French only in the 14th century. It was still playing a recognized role in cookery as late as the 18th century, when the last king of Poland, August Poniatowski, rubbed the edges of his plata daily with asafetida.

Today, though asafetida, despite its acrid taste, is still used, occasionally and sparingly, in French cooking, it is eaten regularly only in the regions where it is grown, in India and Iran, where the whole plant is consumed as a fresh vegetable; the choicest portion is the interior of the stem, esteemed a luxury.

@ 1972, Waverley Root, from & book soon to be published by Simon and Schuster, entitled "Food: An Informal Dictionary."

Irving Marder: Debasing an Art

PARIS (IHT).—The comic-strip world of innocent merriment, a world of mischievous children and clean-limbed, strong-jawed heroes whose expletives are limited to words like "Gosh!" and "Gee whiz," has been invaded by evil-minded interlopers. No kidding.

A bookshop near the Sorbonne, which specializes in university texts, also sells over the counter "comic books," most of them originating in the United States, that are overtly (blatantly would perhaps be a better word) obscene. Soma ara labeled "Adults Only" and some are not. Colorful but crudely drawn, they appear to be aimed mainly at adolescents. At a quick glance you might overlook them among a pile of "Mutt and Jeff" or "Popeye" books.

But a closer look is guaranteed to curl your hair. Among the most revolting is one of several illegitimate offspring of Superman, "Captain Guts Comics." Issue No. 2 is sublitled, "Captain Guts Smashes Black Power!" Captain Guts is a caricature of an All-American hero; the book is emblazoned with such phrases as "For God and Country" and an American eagle holding slott a banner inscribed, "In God We Trust."

Walking along a metropolitan street and looking rather downtrodden, he encounters a shapely Negro girl and thinks (in a bubble caption), "She's black! Pant! Gasp!! Must be a-a prostitute!"

He darts into a nearby saloon, gulps a beer and changes into Captain Guts, an awesome figure of sexual vitality. He can also fly. He takes off after his prey and is about to close in when he is confronted by her protectors—a gorilla-like quartet called the Black Phantom Elite Party. He destroys them by a stratagem that apart from its absurdity, cannot be described in a general circulation news-come In the second episode he encounters the girl said again: "I am no longer Ambrosia Sweetmeat, com-the face the wrath of the Phantom Queen." A 1:21 | tramendood battle ensues before she is conquered. or r. The drawing, though crude, is sexually explicit, and the dialogue bubbles are full of tour letter words. Another of these books originating in Berkeley, bot Calif. but printed and distributed in Europe by it Paranoia, in Holland, features the adventures of not Cooky Cooky—Nakedly alone against a bevy of not hot Nazi amazons, Cooky Cooty meets The Gorilla Women of the Third Reich. Abdunted by two of them in a fast car, he is told "Fran Hildagard is them in a fast car, he is told, "Frau Hildagard is interested in meeting potent individuals with such high-spirited character, like yourself!" They take him to a carnival site. Deep underneath tha midway, Cooch meets Frau Hildagard and finds hundreds of well-trained, loyal women, each chosen for her virility and patiently waiting for the cultivation of the perfect genes for the 'Master Race'l' After that it gets even siller.

On the back cover an artist figure, looking up from his drawing board with a leer, asks: "Are you harboring a powerful sexual attraction for cute li'l cartoon characters?" Above that is a thoughtballoon with the caption "When you buy a Coochy Cooty comic you're not getting just a silly-ass funnybook . . . but your share in a dream." balloon encloses a drawing of goose-stepping soldiers in Prussian-like uniforms.

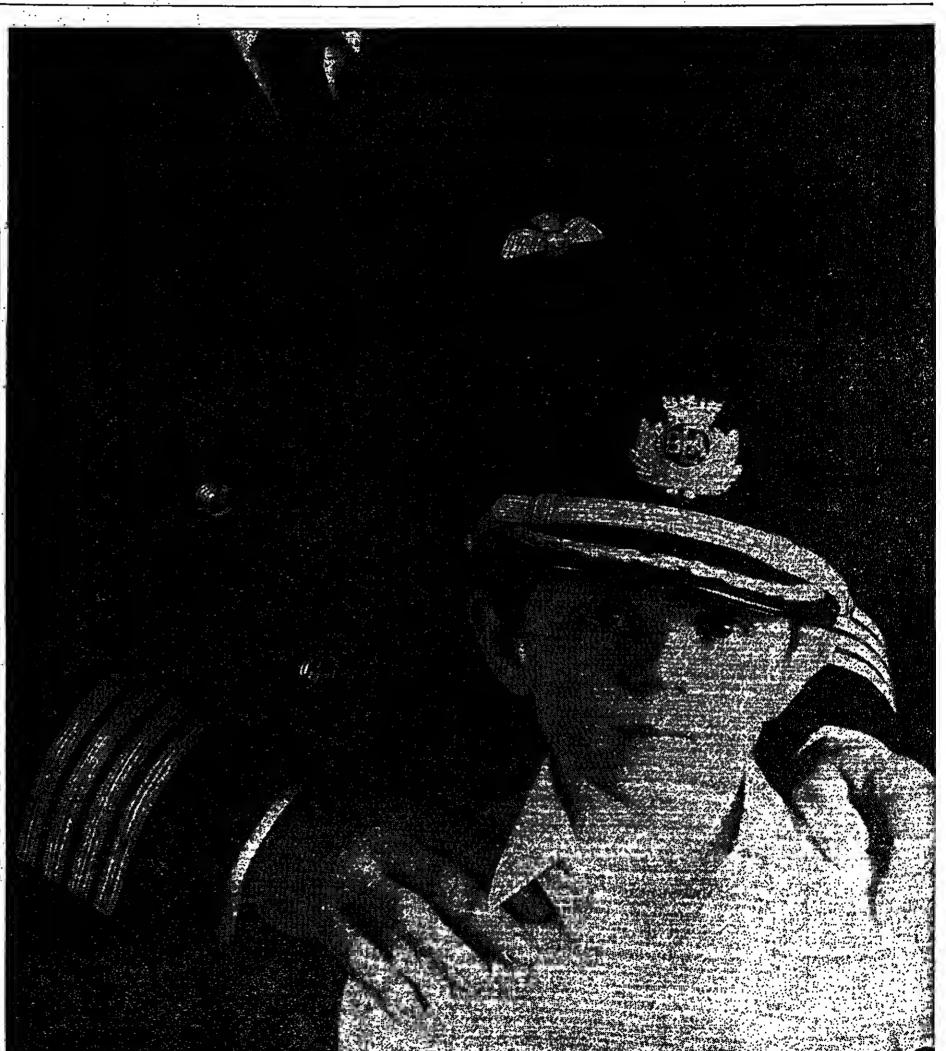

Sickest of all these books, perhaps, is one published in Berkeley by Last-Gasp Ego-Funnies. (It seems not at all unlikely that these are all produced by the same company.) This one is called "Binky Brown Meets the Holy Virgin Mary." the cover a Virgin figure is holding Binky's head as he sits astride a long serpent, "Speak, my son," she says. He replies: "But-my thoughts-not Impure thoughts-no!"

A note inside the front cover says, "Dealers are instructed, under pain of mortal sin, not to sell it to [children]. It's probably a venial sin even to sell this comic to adulfs." This is amply borne out by the contents, the tone of which is set by the opening incident: Little Binky is playing ball on the stairs and the ball goes astray. "Sweet Jesus, Mary and Joseph!!" says his mother, "You've destroyed the Madonna"-fragments of the statuette lie on the floor.

equently, Binky has his first orgasm, thinks impure thoughts about the nuns at his school, and difficult questions in class: "Can't Moslems or, uh, Jewish people go to Heaven and get to see God even if they're good?" The teacher replies:
"Those who through their own grave fault do not know that the Catholic Church is the true church, or know it but refuse to join, cannot be saved!

Some days later the teacher informs the class that Kathy Floss, on whom Binky has a crush is about to undergo major surgery. And so "the mis-guided little bastard prayed till his knees ached," and Kathy recovered.

The cumulative effect of these books, like most pornography, is not titiliation but tedium. The drawing is inept, the stories infantile. And they're not funny. They have merely debased a great popular-art form.

It takes, on average, 15 years training to become a BEA Captain.

In good hands.

When you fly BEA, we can't guarantee that you'll meet your Captain. In fact, the chances are that you won't.

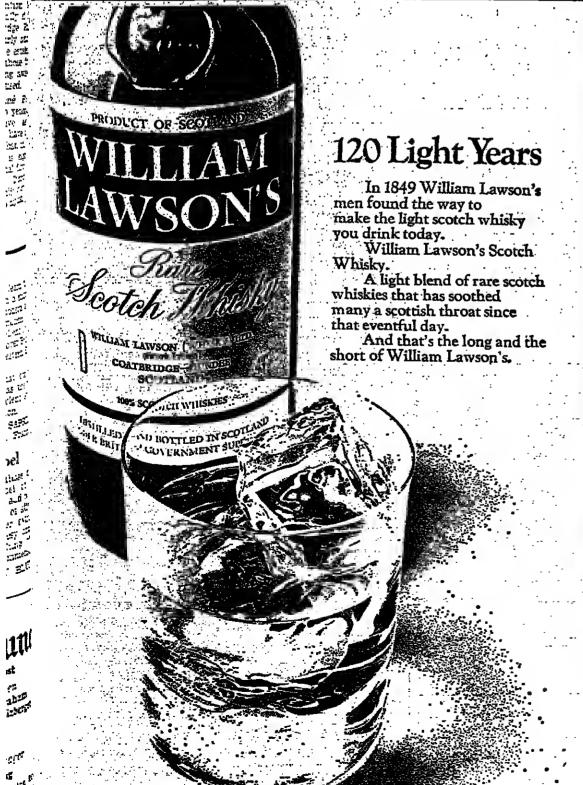

Not because the Captain is uninterested in his passengers. On the contrary, the wellbeing of his passengers is the Captain's prime concern. And the best contribution, he believes, that he can make to that well-being, is to stay in the cockpit, giving his full personal attention to every last detail of the flight.

But just occasionally - though nowhere near as often as he would like - the Captain may hand over to his First Officer, come out of the cockpit, and meet some of his passengers personally. That gives him a lot of pleasure.

To judge from our picture, it often gives our passengers a lot of pleasure, too.

Your Captain wishes you a pleasant flight.

A STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PAR

Education French-U.S. Student Exchange: An Increasing Two-Way Flow

By Betty Werther PARIS (THE)—In the im-mediate postwar years and on through the 1950s when Amer-icans on the GI Bill or a Fulbright grant were flooding universities abroad, the foreign stildent was still a railty on U.S.

Today the flow is increasing. sometimes dramatically, in both directions. This is accompanied by a constant search on official and private levels to find new-ways for stimulating and improv-One ing the quality of exchange. Not only will today's student or scholar seek to immerse himself in another country's culture and to strengthen his capacities in a 145 also be encouraged to consider what he can in turn offer the

In 1954-1955 there were 34,000 foreign students in the U.S. By the academic year 1970-1971 this figure had more than quadrupled By to 144,708. The number of foreign cholers in the U.S. increased iwentyfold over the same period from 635 to 12,047.

France the Leader

On the other side of the picture, AGE the number of U.S. students the students abroad in 1969-1970 was 32,148 (figures from the "Institute for International Education" are presented as "minimal," and are always one year behind those tabulated in the U.S.), the highest ever recorded. This marked an increase of 28 percent over the increase the sear For the year 540, 1970-1971 there were 6,291 U.S. working or studying in foreign nniversities.

More U.S. students, 6,219 for 1969-1970, come to France to study than to any other country, inoluding Canada (5,447). Mexico (4,403), West Germany (2,182) or the United Kingdom (2,098).

Some of these come individually to take advantage of low tuitions, government supported restaurants, health services, etc. But the vast majority are enrolled in one of the "Academic Year Abroad" programs sponsored by an increasing number of American colleges and universities.

In fact, these have mushroomed with such lightning rapidity over recent years that the U.S. Embassy, which has counted 81 U.S. institutions offering everything from the classic junior year to freshman throngh graduate studies, will soon publish a detailed catalog-guide. Twenty-six of these programs are located in Paris, while others are set up in 26 French provincial cities, in-cluding seven in Aix-en-Provence. and seven in Caen. The Kalamazoo-College Academic Program in France, for instance, offers the possibilities for students enrolled at its Michigan campus to take their Junior year in Aix-en-Provence, Caen, Clermont-Ferrand or Strasbourg.

Programs vary widely in cost and outlook. Some practice total immersion by enrolling their students entirely at French univer-sities while others seem virtually to load faculty and campus on a big plane and deposit them in Paris or, like a lonely American outpost, somewhere in the French

Prance, on the other hand, with around 2,000 students enrolled in American universities, ranks far down (19th) on the list of foreign countries with etudents in the United States

This discrepancy is due in large part to the fact that while the majority of Americans in France are undergraduates, the French go to the United States almost entirely to further their graduate studies

But it is also doe to the high fultion costs of American universities, which generally range from between $2,000 and $3,000 as com-annual tuition fee at French universities.

"One of our primary concerns" said Robert McLaughlin, assistant cultural affairs officer at the U.S. Embassy in Paris and a member of the Franco-American Commission for Educational Exchange, "is to find waye of increasing grants for French students. But we are also working on a number of ways to stimulate exchange which don't involve money. These include 'twinnings' of French and American universities, increasing the number of reciprocal teaching fellow-

Needs Help

"But I would say," he added, "that just as important as money is the problem of bridging the information gap." It is almost impossible for a French student to grasp the extremely decentralized nature of the American university set-up. You give him the list of the nearly 3,000 American colleges and universities and he's lost. In short, he needs tremendous help and this is where we are making a particular effort."

Whereas the greatest proportion of U.S. students in France comes study the humanities, the French go to the United States to gain proficiency in science or engineering and to an increasing extent in business administration and management.

Emphasizing the importance which the French government and private business place on training French nationals in this latter specialty, the Fondation Nationale pour l'Enseignement de la Gestion des Entreprises, an increasingly important factor in Franco-American exchange, has used its $2.5-million budget (both government and private funds) to provide 250 scholarships over recent years for graduate study, mostly in the United States, in pared to the nominal, under $25, the business and management. Forty-five of these were awarded field. Grantees are bound by a contractual agreement to teach for three years upon return to

> The tremendous interest built np over recent years for American study programs in French universities (the University of Toulouse alone has 2,800 students enrolled in these courses) also acts as a stimulant for French students to go to the United States.

In 1971 the large counselling service at the American Embassy in Paris received 15,000 inquiries. The same service offers a large reference Horary with catalogs from nearly every U.S. education institution and issues post prepared materials, which are sent to USIS representatives in the provinces, to scores of French libraries and universities,

Last year the embassy set up a provincial counselling service which began as an experiment but which was so successful that it will continue on an annual basis. This program sends to the provinces, on six-week tours, four counselling experts who visit over 90 French university-level insti-

Working closely with the embassy is the Franco-American Commission for Education Exchange (FACEE); which is actually nothing more than a steadfly evolving operation grown out of what was originally known as the "Fulbright" program, a concerted effort on the part of beth governments operating on a combined $500,000 budget to foster academic exchange between the U.S. and France.

Making a Selection

One of the commission's primary functions is to make a "selection" of French graduate students which it recommends for grants to some 20 private American and French foundations, given in Paris and several pro-last year. It also screens students for the French government, which offers another 200 scholarships for study in the U.S.

In addition, it provides its own "Fulbrights" either as full or partial tuition grants or as Travel Only (T.O.) grants to American students, scholars and professors coming to Prance or to French counterparts going to the U.S. This year 50 Americans and 261 French received such financial assistance directly through commission funds

Last year the commission advised 2,000 candidates, preparing 800 dossiers from which 300 graduste students received FACEE approval. These in turn were assisted in the preparation of their "transcript of record" and advised on the choice of a university,

Since the French either through a kind of snobbism or simply ignorance, have a tendency to concentrate in the same 12 prestige universities in the U.S., an attempt is made to provide information on lesser known institutions which, however, have good departments in a particular speciality. They are told, for instance, that for a good degree in mechanical engineering they need not necessarily apply only at M.I.T., Cal Tech or Berkeley and that, indeed, their "American experience" may be richer if they leave the beaten path.

Orientation Booklets

Candidates also receive details on the entrance examinations which most American universities require of foreign students: the T.O.E.F.L. (Test of English as a Foreign Language), the G.A.T. (Graduate Record Examination), a test in the candidate's speciality, or the ATGBS. (Admission Test fer Graduate Study in Business). These exams are

In their general counselling capacity, the U.S. Embassy and the FACEE put out booklets both for Prench going to the U.S. and Americans coming to France. These provide not only detailed information on the main differences between the two systems and the pitfalls of each, but also practical advice. For the French, the booklets advise taking along typically French gifts, kind of "trinkets for the oatives." like perfume, scarves or reproductions.

One booklet also suggests they bring a small cookbook and, if possible, at least one sample menu which the student should be able to execute himself. There is invariably a warning about including an adapter for electrical appliances and a hint that a few concise books on France may help in the event that the student is asked to speak at a local "Rotary" or "Lions" club.

While the French are warned about . "overheated American buildings and freezing outside temperatures," the Americans coming to France are told that few French homes or classrooms have central heating and that they should be prepared to dress accordingly. Americans are also advised to bring along such things as an oral thermometer. Mainly, however, they are told to forget the "persistent and inexplicable myth that living in France is 'cheap.'" "The 1920s terminated decades ago," ooe reads in "Welcome to France." "and although they provide lively literature, they should not be used as a gauge to modern life."

After the massive budget cuts which brought the American contributions to the "Fulbright" program down from $816,000 in 1967 to $160,509 in 1969 and the number of grantees in consequence drepping from a previous 200 to 300 to 11 in the 1969-1970 academic year, the commission has vincial ctities 4 or 5 times a year, redistributed its efforts in new and, as it's turned out, often mere gratifying ways.

> "Now we must get the most mileage out of our 'Fulbright' dollar," said Genevieve Acker, hes d of the American section at the PACEE. "There are no longer abuses as there were sometimes in the past, no more students simply immersing themselves in Paris life while on a kind of paid vacation. Our main effort in this direction has been to build up what we call our junior lecturer program. These are mainly grantees who are earning their doctorates in French literature but at the same time, since they are cultivated young people with teaching experience, can offer up to 5 hours of teaching, generally in American studies, in the French university of their choice. They are all top-quality men and women, scrupulously selected, and the program is proving a great success." This year 18 junior ing in France. A new service, recently creatby the commission and expected to enjoy equal development and success, is called the "Clear-ing House." It will assist French American professors on all levels who wish to exchange positions, houses, etc., for an academic year.

lecturers arc working and study-

"Through all of this" concluded Mr. McLaughlin, "our basic philosophy is that tourism just isn't enough anymore to understand another country. That's why we are going all-out along with the French to stimulate exchange in every way so that more and more young, intelligent people will not only immerse themselves in another country's culture and gain a maximum from the experience, but will also be prepared to contribute something of their own understanding and skill in exchange."

Entertainment In New York

NEW YORK, May 4 (IRT).— This is how the critics rated

new stage productions: "Crucible," Arthur Miller's play about the Salem, Mass, witchhunts revived by the Lincoln Center Repertory Theater, got generally good reviews. "One of the best productions the company has given us. . This is probably Mr. Miller's best play." Olive Barnes writes. When the play was first produced in 1953 it "seemed to be an artist's reply to the infamous witch-hunt instigated by Sen. Joseph R. Mc-Carthy," Barnes says, "Now its story of a man, his conscience and the Salem Witchcraft Trials of 1692 takee on a wider pattern unclouded by topical connotations. This is to the play's uitimate advantage" he wrote in The New York Times.

John Berry directed, at tho Vivian Beaumont Theater. "An Evening With Richard Nixon And..." by Gore Vidal, got mixed reviews from two crities.

Clive Barnes, of The Times, "I laughed a lot at this political blood-letting—and yet at the end I felt a little cheated. Nixon-cuoted out of context quipped at in the semblance of a debate but one in which the victim had no chance or reply..."

AP reporter William Glover describes the play as a "thinly veiled continuation" of Vidal's derates with William F. Buckley. in 1968, that later on is enlarged into a multiple confrontation, Edwin Sherin directed the cast

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Profit Outlook Gloomy at Hoechst

A STATE OF THE STA

Farbwerke Hoechst has little prospect of increasing profits this year after a 28 percent drop in group earnings last year to 245 million DM, executive chairmen Rold Sammet says. He predicts a turnover increase of between 5 and 7 percent for the year, after group turnover in 1971 rose over 7 percent to 8.86 billion Dac. In the first quarter sales were 1.9 percent up on the same 1971 period at 2.1 billion DM, Mr.

AEG Expects Pre-Tax Profit Rise

AEC-Telefunken expects group pre-tax profit to rise "substantially" fhis year after falling 38 percent to 140 million deutsche marks from 1970 to 1971, Hans Groebe, chairman reports. World-wide sales will climb to 10.8 billion DM from 10.05 billion marks last year, he adds. In the first quarter of 1972, Mr. Groebe says, worldwide sales rose 13 percent from a year earlier.

China Reports Rich Mineral Finds

China reports it discovered rich deposits of coal, iron, copper and molybdenum in its eastern province of Anhwei last year. The official New China News Agency says the iron deposits alone account for one-fifth of the combined total of fron discovered in the province eince 1949.

Marathon Oil Sees Earnings Gain Marathon Oil's earnings will show "a substantially better comparison with 1971 than the first-quarter results would indicate," if product prices continue to show reasonable strength,

J. P. Donnell 2d, president, told the annual meeting. This improvement isn't expected to materialize, however, until the second half of the year," he added. Marathon's first-quarter income declined 28.6 percent to 54 cents share due to "extreme weakness" in prices for distillate fuel oil in West Germany, generally lower refined product prices in the United States and curtailed production in Libya and higher tax and royalty payments to its govern-ment, Mr. Donnell said.

Franco-Italian Link in Soft Drinks

Source Perrier, a major French producer of mineral waters and soft drinks, reports it has acquired 35 percent of the capital of San Pellegrino; of Italy, subject to government approval. Perrier also says it has signed a technical and marketing agreement with San Pellegrino designed to strengthen their position on the inter-national soft drink market, especially in tha European Economic Community. Perrier is known to be negotiating marketing facilities with Margarine-Union, of West Germany.

Cities Service to Open Copper Mine

Cities Service Co. says it plans to develop a large copper ore deposit in Arizona. Construc-tion is expected to cost approximately $100 million. The company says site preparation is to start immediately on construction of a 40,-000-ton-a-day mine and mill complex to develop the deposit at Pinto Valley. When completed, Cities Service says, the operation will have an annual production of 125 million pounds of recoverable copper and some molybdenum.

Such deficits tend to fuel inflation. Government efforts to big deficits, such as finance through Federal Reserve purchases of Treasury securities, tend to swell the nation's money supply. Excessive monetary growth, in turn, kindles inflation, experience indicates.

The money supply, in fact, has been rising sharply. Since late last year, it has risen at an aunual rate of about 10 percent, far above the 5 percent or so that many economists claim is consistent with noninflationary business expansion.

Some analysts note that the recent sharp rise in the money supply follows a period of very slow monetary expansion—a rate of less than 1 percent annually between July and December, 1971. Accordingly, it is argued, monetary growth over the past year or so has not really been all that

One huge imponderable hangs over the outlook for prices, analysts stress. To the extent that the current step-up in fighting in Vietnam leads to higher military spending, inflationary pressure is likely to increase. However, some economists argue that beyond this year U.S. involvement in Vietnam is likely to diminish, regardless of what now happens on the battlefield. If that turns out to be the case, pressure on prices in the long run should tend to subside.

Auto Sales Up

DETROIT, May 4 (AP-DJ) .-U.S.-made auto sales started to accelerate last month but imported auto sales dropped.

The pace of U.S.-made car sales in April rose 9.3 percent from a year earlier to a record for the month, helped by a 23,6 percent surge during the final third of the month.

The rate of imported car sales, after hovering close to year-earlier levels during the first quarter, deteriorated, dropping an estimated 10 percent for the Volkswagen, still the leader, reported a 29.6 percent drop to 39,875 units. Toyota showed an 11.5 percent decline to 20,124 units and Datsun sales plunged 34 percent to 11,912 units.

However, sharp increases were registered by Capri (up 84.9 per-cent and imported by Ford), Fiat, Renault, Subaru, Saab, Colt (imported by Chrysler from Mitsubishi Heavy Industries) Mazda (up 308 percent) and Honda (up 160 percent).

Sales by Ford rose 17.6 percent and American Motors showed a 39.7 percent spurt. Deliveries of General Motors dealers were up 6.8 percent, but Chrysler deliveries were off 0.5 percent.

Fund Cash-Ins Seen Topping Sales in April

WASHINGTON, May 4 (AP-DJ).-A survey of several major U.S. mutual funds with aggregate assets of about $24 billion indicates the industry may again have redeemed more shares than it sold last month.

The funds surveyed repreeent about 25 percent of the industry's assets. All but one said they had net redemptions during April History lends further credence to the possibility of net redemptions for April because since 1969 April cash-ins have exceeded those in March. The industry has had net redemotions for the past two months, with gross redemptions increasing eteadily since January—thus drying up the purchasing power of these large institutional investors.

Called 'Breathing Spell' By Vartanig G. Vartan

NEW YORK, May 4 (NYT) .-New York Stock Exchange prices held steady today, despite investor concern over the military sitne-tion in South Vietnam, where the Communist forces have made spectacular gains this week.

The Dow Jones industrial average, displaying its first advance since last Friday, climbed elowly during the day to finish at 937.31,

In the three previous sessions the Dow dropped a total of 20.70. Soma analysts viewed today's tcken gain as a "breathing spell" in the wake of earlier losses. Despite the Dow's upswing, losers outpaced winners by a 7-to-6 Sharing honors were a strong automotive group and numerous glamour issues, the latter showing more of a bounce in the afternoon.

General Motors rose 1 1/4 to 73 7/6. Chrysler, selling exdividend, gained 1/2 to 34 3/6. Ford rose 1 to 69 3/4. This followed the report of record new-car sales for the final third of April and also for the full month.

American Motors, repeating as the most active issue, sped ahead 7/6 to 9 1/9, closing at its best price of the year. It also ranked as the Big Board's leading percentage gainer. This performance was fueled by the company's March-quarter profits of $5.3 million, or the second-best quarter since 1965. A year ago, American Motors sustained a loss of $4.8 million. Car sales for the company, the nation's fourth-ranking producer, ara climbing. Warner Communications, formerly Kinney Services, rose 1 to 43 3/4 after announcing an acquisition plan for its subsidiary, Television Communications Corp. Levitz Gains Levitz Furniture climbed 1 1/4 to 49 1/2 after disclosing a sales gain of 90 percent for April. This reflected a substantial increase in the number of Levitz units during the last year.

Revion, up 1 1/8 to 71, showed higher first-quarter profits. Climbing by fractions after reporting increased earnings were Mapco, Planning Research and American Standard. Hoffman Electronics, up 3/4 to 26 3/4, said it expects a substantial profit gain for 1972.

Amex Stable

Meanwhile, after three trading days of sharply declining prices this week. change shares showed stability today. As measured by the index the prices were down only 0.01 to 27.48, in quite slow volume of only 3.8 million shares.

The story had an even better ending in the OTC market where the NASDAQ index managed to show a gain of 0.41, to end at 136.70.

Trading over-the-counter was described as mixed but "fractionally higher" in moderate volume, which means prices tended to move up but not hy much in most instances.

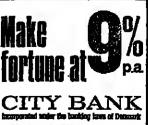

NASDAQ actives included Faraday, 16 1/2, up 1/2; Educator Executive, 48 1/2, up 1/4; Rank, 30 1/4, up 5/9, and North Central Air, 6 1/6, unchanged. On the bond market a late rally helped corporates to improve to-ward the end of the session. Recent secondary issues closed up 1/6 to 1/4 in spots. In the government market Treasury bills showed some strength but dealers said technical factors accounted for the move. QUARTERLY DIVIDENDS SINCE 1935

ed here tomorrow night, game Steadiness, strong defense and good use of Wilt Chamberlain near the basket were the ingredients scored 26 points, missing only one of 10 shots from the floor and only three of 11 from the foul Hne, and took down 20 rebounds. Happy Hairston collected 20 more.

With Jerry West not exactly back on the beam but shooting well enough to score 21 points, with Gail Goodrich scoring 25 and Jim McMillian 16, the Lakers produced a game typical of their season. They have now won 79 regular season and 10 of 13 playoff starts-and no NBA team has

West, in the process, brought his point total to 4,002 in playoff competition during an 11-year career. He holds the record.

While DeBusschere played 20 minutes in the first half, he seemed able to get up and down the floor, and got nine rebounds. But the rebounds were more the result of good position than leaping, and he missed all six of his shots. He wasn't hurting the team, bot he felt he couldn't do what he had to. Nevertheless, most of the time he played, the Knicks stayed

A Flock of Fouls

They were actually ahead, 28-23, at the quarter, but it started to slip away when they accumulated a flock of fouls in the second period while the Lakers were committing only one defensive foul. It was 38-36 with five minutes to go in the half, with both teams shooting poorly. But the Lakers started to play well and led at the half, 52-47.

They made it 76-54 in the third period, which finished with the score 80-65. It was a period in which the Knicks made only 7 of

The Knicks pulled within 8 points with 10 minutes still to play, but the margin never got maller than that

The statistics that hurt concerned Knick shooting: Bill Bradley, 5 for 17; Earl Monroe, 2 for 11. Dick Barnett played 19 minutes (he shot 6 for 9); and was encouraging, and DeBusschere may or : may not improve. But the Lakers emerged from this one in command of the series. Wednesday's Game

Los Angeles 107 (Chamberlain 26, Geodrich 25), New York 96 (Frazier 25, Lucas 23) (Lakers lead best-of-soven chambionship playoff, two games to one).

The Grand Prix of Monaco Formula One auto race has agreed "under pressure" to increase the number of starters to At the Spanish Grand Prix, beld on Monday, Andrew Ferguson, a spokesman for the Formula One Association of Constructors, reportedly threatened a boycott if the number was not increased. Traditionally, the race organizers limit the starters to 18 for safety reasons, and this year had decided to admit 20. The course has been slightly modified this year, moving the pits to a less congested area.

Investigators said that some persons who are opposed to holding the 1976 Winter Olympics in Colorado set fire to the 90-meter ski jump at Howsen Hills near Steamboat Springs. Earlier this week, vandals painted anti-Olympic slogans on the wood structure. The blaze destroyed the wooden landing platform, the only one of its kind in the state. The jump had been proposed for use in Nordic events in the 1976 games, to be hosted by Denver.

Gets Derby Post No. 9 Key To The Mint Is Out; 16 Entered

By Joe Nichols

LOUISVILLE, May 4 (NYT) — Everybody was satisfied with the draw today for the Kentucky Derby. The famous 1 1/4-mile race for 3-year-olds will have its 98th consecutive running on Saturday, and 16 names were sent through the entry box this morning, on payment of $1,000 each. A further payment of $1,000 each will be forthcoming on Saturday to start in the race—the first part of the triple crown for 3-year-olds, followed by the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes.

Riva Ridge, No Le Hace, Hold Your Peace and Head Of The River, among the more formidable colts in the list of probables all will go, as expected.

One notable absentee will be Key To The Mint. The star campaigner from the Rokeby Stable appeared to excellent advantage in winning the Derby Trial of one mile on Tuesday. But Elliott Burch, who trains for Paul Mellon, Rokeby's owner, decided today to bypass the big race, preferring instead to be represented by Head Of The River, also a Rokeby colt.
"When I came down here I didn't really plan to run Key To The Mint unless he won by 10 lengths or looked like a super horse. He ran a good race but he's not quite up to a mile and a quarter. It's the hetter part of valor to keep him in the barn, he said.

Burch Dancer and Arts and Letters to second-place finishes and Belmont victories but has yet to score in the Derby. Riva Ridge, who will be ridden by jockey Ron Turcotte, drew post position 9, a circumstance that pleased the trainer of the Meadow Farm horse, Lucien Laurin, Earlier in the week, Laurin had expressed misgivings about drawing a position too close to the inside rail. Riva Ridge continues to be the choice, quoted today at 9 to 5.

Hold Your Peace, the second choice on the overnight line, owned by Mrs. Maribel Blum and trained by Arnold Winick, drew the No. 3 position, also pleasing to the trainer. Winick, in jest, had a slip with No. 3 on it palmed before the draw.

No Le Hace, which is owned by Joseph Straus and is the third choice, drew the outside post No. 16, a matter of little concern to trainer Homer Pardue. Of the other strong candidates.

Head Of The River drew post 14 and the Middletown Stable's Freetex got the rail. The race will have one entry, Robert Lehmann's Majestic Needle and Napoise, and five members of the this pair. The others in the mntuel field are Dr. Neale, Our Trade Winds and Big Spruce. Both Are Back his final workout this morning. Jerry Quarry, the World The colt breezed four furlongs in Boxing Council's second-ranked 47 4/5 seconds and came back to heavyweight contender in the the barn without drawing a deep breath.

Hold Your Peace also worked, doing five furlongs in 1:00 1/5. Winick said the Flamingo winner has been right on schedule.

Darwin was in Mexico when he heard the Los Angeles Dodgers had traded him to the Twins for outfielder Paul Powell.

A Chance at Last

"I felt great about it because knew I was going to get a chance to play at last," said Darwin. "I just wanted manager Bill Rigney to give me a good look in spring training, hoping things would work out for me.

Darwin, after hitting .293 for Spokane in the Pacific Coast League last season, got into 11 late-season games with the Dodgers and hit one home run but didn't expect to get a chance to crack the Los Angeles outfield.

Barbecue Sauce

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON.—John Connally had a olg carbecue at his Texas ranch the other day. The President was there. So were a number of guests -- "powerful Texans." The New York Times called them. The kind of people who fly around in private jets, according to The Washington

The President spoke. He was hawkish on the war, resolute against "permissiveness." outspoken against people who want. Something for nothing," hostile to busing, unenthusiastic about welfare and people who won't take menial jobs, and sympathetic to greater federal support for the oil industry. He was applauded enthusiastically.

Baker

The news reports suggest that it was the most enthusiastic reception Nixou has received in months, but the newsmen who say so were obviously not present at the big parbecue Bill Buskindorp held in our block a few days before the Connally party.

Some 30 people showed up at Bill'e. The kind of people who are influential in our block People who drive their own station wagons, people who work hard at well paid, pointless whitecollar jobs and keep a gun under the mattress.

When the President arrived a murmur of admiration ran the crowd clustered around the barbecue grill on Bill Buskindorp's back porch, for the President had dressed with a consummate flair for fitting right into our group. He wore checkered Bermuda shorts, dirty sneakers and a paint-stained T-shirt; He apologized for Mrs. Nixon's not having her hair up in curlers on such short notice to drop in on Bill's barbecue that there hadn't been enough time for the First Lady to get appropriately As the host, Bill Buskindorp suggested that the President address us briefly about what he stood for and what he was against but said that they had decided and then take a few questions from the guests. The President agreed. He immediately won enthusiastic applause by stating that he strongly favored the application of either mustard or ketchup to hamburgers.

He had been particularly pleased, he went on, to observe that none of us, as he looked out over us at that moment, was eating a hamburger that had been treated with both mustard and ketchup. Mustard alone was fine, he said. Ketchup alone was fine. But mustard and ketchup were the weak compromise of the intellectually enfeebled

On taxes, the President drew warm applause by declaring that he would defend the tax breaks granted to people who worked hard at well paid, pointless whitecollar jobs, if there were any such tax breaks to defend. Such tax breaks were nonexistent, he said, only because of the lamentable failure of most well paid white-collar workers to work as hard at their pointless jobs as we, there on Bill's back porch,

The President said he was opposed to station-wagoning children to and from schools, dancing classes, music lessons, Cub Scout meetings and birthday parties. The women in the audience tore off their hair curlers, and hurled them into the air while giving the President three cheers.

The President said he would answer questions, Steve Witcomb began by saying that most of us were bored with the war and asked what the President's position on it was. The President said that none of us was more bored. with the war than he was. As we applauded, he spoke gravely of the awful burden of boredom that the office of the President had to support. He pledged that he would never shirk from that burden simply because it was boring.

As we applauded the departing President to his limousine he asked his chauffeur what kind of people would be present at the next barbecue. "Peace lovers," the chauffeur said. The President said in that case he had better stop by the White House long enough to pick up a beard.

E.B. White Updates 'Elements of Style'

By Israel Shenker

NEW YORK (NYT).—Transmuted by E.B. White, "The Elements of Style" has emerged in a second edition.

When the first edition came out in 1959 (Macmillan), it was boldly and delightfully prescriptive, booming out drill-squad orders: Write it simply! Tell it clearly! Out the fat! Get out of the way!

Tone and tempo owed much to Mr. White's 1919 teacher at Cornell University, William Strunk jr., who wrote the original manual from which Mr. White worked, and who lived and died insistently faithful to linguistic precision. His estate (he died in 1946) still gets half the royalties.

As a joint venture of late master and past master, the work sold over 200,000 in hardcover and over 2 million in all. Last year the paperback sale was over 179,000. Mr. White was faithful to the spirit of the original work, which he described as an attempt "to cut the vast tangle of English rhetoric down to size and write its rules and principles on the head of a pin."

Impossible

"You can help people improve their writing," said Mr. White in an interview, "but you can't teach them to write an English sentence—it's impossible. There are some people who can live to 150 and they couldn't write a declarative sentence because it isn't in them."

For those with hope in their hearts and declarative sentences in their transmissions. Mr. White's second edition has cut away a chip here and there (he calls them errors"), removed some of the patina of age ("bewhiskered entries") and polished the gem to new perfection ("a thorough

"People love to discover something wrong, particularly in a book of this sort," Mr. White said. One was Eleanor Gould Packard, a copy editor at The New Yorker, where Mr. White tolled for many years. When the first edition appeared, Mrs. Packard marked up a copy according to the magazine's style and her own ideas and then asked Mr. White if he wanted to see it. "I sure do want to see it." he said.

Mr. White took her advice on many points, and also on a few points made by three advisers ("academic types," he called them) delegated by Macmillan. Last sunmer he reached into the folder in which he had been eathering his own notes for the revision and produced a draft of the

He worked at his farm at North Brooklin, Maine, dividing his time between the care and feeding of the livestock and the

ancing a sentence or turning a phrase can now savor fresh wonders in textual comparisons of earlier and later vintages of

See how he changes "gain of three words" to "saving of three words." Note how he replaces "an unskillful writer" with "an unskilled writer." Observe the sieekness of his lines as he takes a phrase descriptive of longer texts—"books with up-swept tail fins and automatic verbs"—and provides a later model with "permissive steering and automatic transitions."

Marvel at how he appears to have mel-lowed (though he denies it—"I'm getting more acid rather than more mellow"). An example of good usage in the first edition —"He thought the study of Latin useless" is softened now: "He thought the study of Latin a waste of time."

In the first edition he writes, "There is no such word as alright," and this time. The variant alright bas not won general

The earlier edition maintains that the expression and/or "destroys the flow and goodness of a sentence." Now it "dam-"Enthuse" is at first "unacceptable in formal writing"; now it is "not recom-mended." "Data" unreservedly command the plural in the first edition. This time Mr. White writes that data "Is slowly gaining acceptance as a singular."

From the tangle of the English language Mr. White picks new thoms:

Anticipate. "Use expect in the sense of simple expectation," he writes.

Finalize. "A pompous, ambiguous verb." Hopefully. Mr. White notes that it means with hope but is now used to mean I hope or it is to be hoped. Not only wrong, he complains, but also silly. "To say, Hopefully, I'll leave on the noon plane' is to talk nonsense. Do you mean you'll leave on the noon plane in a hopeful frame of mind? Or do you mean you hope you'll leave on the noon plane?"

Relevant, trrelevant. "Use these words." Mr. White writes, "to express a precise re-lationship, not a vague discontent . . . A student finds society out of joint, or him-self out of joint, takes refuge in the word irrelevant, using it as a general term of disapprobation. He damns history and wipes out the past with a single stroke. There is a kind of arrogance in labeling everything that has taken place in the world as 'irrelevant.' " .

Predictions

"These words always bored me," said Mr. White, "because they're often used by people to express a vague discontent, but they're not attributed to anything. I don't like to see words hanging in air." To his final chapter on style, Mr. White has added a passage predicting that "by the time this paragraph sees print, uptight, groovy, rap, hangup, vibes, copout, and dig will be the words of yesteryear . . ." He suggests reserving such words for conversa-tion and keeping them off the page. All of this is put with restraint. "I try to keep my cool," said Mr. White. "Strunk always kept his cool and I model myself on him. But I'm not a grammarian and I'm not a rhetorician, or whatever you call it. I write mostly by ear."

The second edition (which sells at $3.50; paper $1.25) leaves little doubt that some of his earlier words to the wise have proved sufficient. Mr. White has dropped earlier examples of poor usage such as aforesaid, can't hardly, oftentimes and ofttimes. Even the disagreeable phase (for aspect or topic) has been phased out. But he has held firm to fundamentals, such as the advice to shun unthinking obedience to every drill-field order. "Tm a rule-breaker," he noted. 'It says some-where in the book that when you break Melvin Belli, the criminal lawa rule there must be some compensating yer, is going to be married again, this time to Lia Triff, a 23-yearfactor. I use the book and I also ignore it." old University of Maryland student who got off to a good start

Former Australian Prime Minister John Gorton this week described the day when he did not throw Britain's Queen Ehzabeth into the water. The occasion was "one of the greatest fun evenings I can remember." Gorton told a women's luncbeon in Sydney. While the royal yacht Britannia was anchored near an island in the Great Barrier Reef off the Queensland coast, "people decided everyone else ought to be thrown into the water. Prince Philip was thrown in, and then Princess Anne. I was sitting be-side the queen. I was about to throw her in, but I looked at her and there was something in the way she looked back."
